Governing and Maintenance

Michael Madrigal (Cahuilla)

Native American Land Conservancy President

Michael is the current president of the Native American Land Conservancy. He is a member of the Cahuilla Band of Indians. He has dedicated much of his life to support efforts that protect and strengthen the traditional cultural and spiritual ties of tribal communities to their homelands. Increasing understanding of these original and ongoing relationships between Indigenous peoples and the land is key to the survivance and vitality of tribal communities. He is honored to have learned from many tribal elders and acknowledges these elders who have dedicated their lives to keeping Indigenous wisdom vital in our communities. Michael is currently a graduate student at the University of California, Riverside, in the Native American / Ethnic Studies PhD program.
